

It's Ryan "The Orchid Guy" here again :-)

In today's newsletter, we're going to answer two of the first questions you might be asking when it comes to getting your orchid to rebloom.

The first is, "How OFTEN is my orchid supposed to bloom in a year??"

And the second is, "How LONG is my orchid supposed to bloom each time it flowers??"

If you're having problems getting your orchid to bloom, BEFORE trying to figure out whether you're doing something wrong, it's important to know the natural blooming cycle of your particular orchid.

Some varieties only bloom once a year, and their blooming period can be quite brief!

That being said, there are many "tricks" you can use to get your orchids to bloom more often... and longer each time. And I'll teach you a few of those techniques in later issues of this newsletter...

For now, let's look at those two very important questions in more detail: How Often? & How Long?

Naturally, the answer to both of these questions depends on the the type of orchid you're growing.

So, for the purposes of today's newsletter, let's look at the differences between two common varieties - Cattleyas & Vandas.

Cattleyas, in spite of their popularity typically only bloom once a year, during either Spring or Autumn, and usually only for 7-12 days each time.

Vandas, by contrast will bloom 2-3 times a year, in all seasons, and usually 30-90+ days each time!

What a difference, right?

That's why it really pays to know which varieties offer "the best bloom for your buck" :-)

In our book, "Orchids Made Easy" we provide a handy chart with blooming details of all the most common orchid varieties to help you make smart choices when choosing your next orchid - so you won't waste your time on varieties that only bloom for a couple of days...

(unless you enjoy a challenge) :-)

We also share with you a few secret varieties we've discovered that actually produce NON-STOP blooms, ALL YEAR LONG!

(we couldn't believe it either, until we tried these varieties for ourselves on the advice of a fellow orchid maven. Now my wife calls these guys our little "Energizer Bunnies"... because they keep going, and going, and going...)

If you'd like to learn more about the book (even if you're just curious) please click on the following link:

<http://www.OrchidsMadeEasy.com/TheBook.html>

Thanks for reading... and many more tips to come!

To healthy, vibrant blooms,

Ryan "The Orchid Guy" :-)

P.S. - Reblooming aspects aside, if you'd like to have a comprehensive orchid reference guide (everything you really need to know about orchids, all in one place), then you will LOVE our Orchids Made Easy book.

Would you kindly take a moment to look at the link below?

(The book is fully refundable if you have any problems whatsoever - and you're backed by our ironclad 6-Month 100% Money-Back Guarantee.)

And for those of you who might be a little nervous about ordering something over the internet, please note that we provide simple step-by-step order instructions which assume no computer knowledge.)

Anyway - here is the link below:

<http://www.OrchidsMadeEasy.com/TheBook.html>

Thanks again!